

Garden of the worlds -first edition

Nightmare garden of Bordeleaux

A kind of trap field surrounding the penal colony. It is 'equipped' with various obstacles to prevent escape, such as aggressive insects, birds and insects living among beautiful (and fertilised by escapees) trees, wolf pits, fruit stuffed with explosives, or tripwires irritating local hornet hives. All species of trees and probably most poisonous plants grow there. It is the perfect place for a walk for someone who wants to end their life in an interesting (and rather painful) way.

Eden garden of Schlange Isthmus

Rather, it is a small sacred forest in the coastal town of Schlange Isthmus. It contains all species of trees and is partially located within the town. The town also has a universal temple without a roof. It has several levels from which religious rituals can be observed - from the floor, from wooden balconies styled like boats, and from a net hung between the walls. To the east of the town is a sacred cemetery island belonging to the Gulpa cult.

The rhomboidal garden at Oakwood

<https://www.landsoflords.com/arm/org/76800>

An orchard enclosed between country roads, with weirwoods growing in its centre. The village is famous for producing the second-best wild boar meat in the world (during of the publication of this book). On south of the village there are two abandoned villages – the perfect place to reflect on the future.

Giant orchards of Sigurn family on island and peninsula on south from city of Brame-Sur-Mer. In village of Pilaris and lordship of Kear Morhen there are a lot of orchards. I would say coverage of those domains are similar to coverage of orchards of Nightmare garden of Bordeleaux, but well a lot safer to travel and rest in – you can feed here birds without risk of losing eyes.
